

(Free download) Development Cooperation and Emerging Powers: New Partners or Old Patterns?

Development Cooperation and Emerging Powers: New Partners or Old Patterns?

From Zed Books

*ebooks / Download PDF / ePub / DOC / audiobook

DOWNLOAD

READ ONLINE

#2208463 in eBooks 2012-05-10 2012-11-15 File Name: B00A76X4VO | File size: 64.Mb

From Zed Books : Development Cooperation and Emerging Powers: New Partners or Old Patterns? before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Development Cooperation and Emerging Powers: New Partners or Old Patterns?:

The current framework of development cooperation is dominated by the experiences of industrialized countries. But emerging economies have begun to accelerate their own development programmes, and attempts to bring them into existing aid models have been met with caution and reservation. This expert, topical volume explores the development policies of Brazil, China, India, Mexico and South Africa, analysing how South-South cooperation has evolved and where it differs from traditional development cooperation. This vital new collection brings together first-hand experience from these countries to provide a forward-looking analysis of the current global architecture of development cooperation and of the possible convergence of traditional and emerging development actors.

'This is a fascinating and informative book: nothing less than a new guide to modern development cooperation. It shows us how the fight against poverty works in a world barreling towards multipolarity. It foretells a new paradigm based on the experiences of the old and the new approaches of the emerging economies in the world Provocative and challenging.' Bert Koenders, UN Undersecretary General and former Minister of Development Cooperation, The Netherlands 'With some large emerging economies assuming an active role alongside traditional 'donors', global development discourse has become more contentious. Featuring top experts from seven countries, this excellent collection reflects these debates. It also explores what values and institutions might realistically coordinate the development efforts of disparate partners which might otherwise impede, cancel or duplicate one another.' Thomas Pogge, Leitner Professor of Philosophy and International Affairs, Yale University 'This book describes the political vision changing the lives of millions in Latin America. It is a manual of thrilling example for us all.' John Pilger About the Author Dr. Sachin Chaturvedi is a Senior Fellow at the Research and Information System for Developing Countries, a think-tank with the Ministry of External Affairs, Government of India New Delhi. Until recently, he was Global Justice Fellow at the MacMillan Center for International Affairs at Yale University, where he worked on issues related to global governance and access to innovation and technology. He is author of two books and has published several research articles in various prestigious journals. Thomas Fues, trained as an economist, has been with German Development Institute / Deutsches Institut fuer Entwicklungspolitik (DIE) as Senior Fellow since 2004, where he also started his professional career in 1980. His main research interests are global governance, rising powers, United Nations, and international development cooperation. Recent publications include articles on the G8/G20, the role of rising powers in the global system, the UN development sector as well as on human rights, and global governance. In addition to his research tasks, Dr. Fues, since 2009, heads the training department at the German Development Institute. In previous stages of his career, he worked for the German parliament, the Institute of Peace and Development (University Duisburg-Essen), the government of North Rhine Westphalia, the German Advisory Council on Global Change as well as a freelance consultant. Elizabeth Sidiropoulos is the national director of the South African Institute of International Affairs (SAIIA) and the editor-in-chief of the South African Journal of International Affairs.