Ondřej Horký-Hlučáň : Development Cooperation of the 'New' EU Member States: Beyond Europeanization (EADI Global Development Series) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Development Cooperation of the 'New' EU Member States:

Beyond Europeanization (EADI Global Development Series):

The book provides a comprehensive analysis of the international development policies of ten Central and Eastern European countries that joined the EU between 2004 and 2007. The contributors offer the first thorough overview of the 'new' EU member states' development cooperation programmes, placing them in a larger political and societal context.

'The authors make a clear case for the limited effects of the imposed development policy-standards leading to a 'shallow Europeanization' This study forms a unique contribution to the field of European development cooperation studies.' - Louk Box, Honorary Professor of International Cooperation at Maastricht University, The Netherlands 'This is a timely and important contribution to the field of Development and EU studies. With the EU development assistance in flux, and the mounting criticism of the EU's 'missing the point' when it comes to dealing with the complexity and multifariousness of post-communist transitions often simplistically and inadequately bundled in the 'New Europe' entity this collective volume offers a hitherto absent perspective and a critical insight in the emergence of Central European States as independent and influential actors. With its detailed country-specific accounts masterfully drawn together to open the floor to the alternative normative theories, this book effectively questions the fundamentals of the EU Self and its relational power over its composites.' - Elena A.
