Chuck Vollmer : Jobenomics: A Plan For America: 20 Million New Jobs by 2020 before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Jobenomics: A Plan For America: 20 Million New Jobs by 2020:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A must read... but remember "... not everything that counts can be counted."By Lee KelsoFrom my perspective, this book is full of worthy ideas. It is a perspective and everyone has one. I wanted to give it a 3.5 as it is only part of the big picture. I also wanted to give it a 5 because it is so "head and shoulder's" above much of what is being shared in the mainstream media. I think it should be read with Collaborative Intelligence as these authors share some deep insights that Chuck doesn't really speak too, like "we are living in a

'hinge time' ... we are moving from a market share mentality to a mind share mentality." And "we were educated for a time that no longer exist." The world is one, full of data and you can't just look at the numbers alone, nor one's interpretation of the numbers. There are new development in IT... fields called Data Scientist and Data Artist. Read along with this book one entitled Quantum Economics by Dr. Amit Goswami. He uses quantum physics to explain where capitalism is going. There are two domains... the mind aka consciousness and material matter. Again Chuck doesn't go there and that is ok because Chuck is who Chuck is. Just so you don't think I am negative about Chuck and his book, he is doing a lot with this book to open the minds eye of many people. A great read if you are looking at a perspective that may not be consider "extreme" to the old guard! Make sure whatever you read, you are always looking outside of the proverbial box... nothing is as it seems. And remember Einstein's or whomever said it... "not everything that can be counted counts and not everything that counts can be counted."

Today, this engine has stalled. The decade of the 2000s lost one million American jobs, whereas the previous three decades averaged approximately 20 million new jobs per decade. If the next decade, the 2010s, generates only marginal jobs growth, the US economy could collapse under the weight of US debt and obligations. The US has several hundred trillions of dollars worth of debt, which it will not be able to pay if its workforce does not grow. The Jobenomics team is launching a national 20 by 20 campaign to create 20 million new US private sector jobs by 2020. 20 by 20 includes initiatives for government, large business, small and self-employed businesses, foreign investment in US businesses, and major emerging technology initiatives. Through Jobenomics, Americans will have common cause and resources to create jobs in order to build a more prosperous future.

About the Author Chuck Vollmer is the founder and President of Jobenomics LLC, a company dedicated to developing a national call-to-action campaign to create 20 million new US private sector jobs by 2020. Chuck is also the founder and President of VII Inc., an international strategic planning, systems engineering and investment capital firm specializing in emerging government and business initiatives. Prior to VII, he was an executive in a leading US consulting firm, an executive in the world's second largest aerospace firm, as well as a highly decorated fighter pilot. Over his career, Chuck has started hundreds of new businesses from major multi-billion dollar organizations to small businesses. Author Residence Washington DC
